PERU, THE LAND OF THE INCAS.
PART II.

From Lima to the Top of the Andes in Peru.

REEL VI

2. Everybody who is Somebody in Lima is a Member of the Jockey Club, and attends the Races to see and to be seen. The Regular Fans Stand in the "Bleachers."
3. A Market Scene in Lima. From Producer to Consumer direct. Every Bundle is weighed Twice before it leaves the Market - not a Bad Idea.
4. Peru is a Land of Contrasts. Those who are up are up, and those who are down are down - and out. The Down- and-Outers receive their Daily Stew from the Monks and Brothers.
5. "Fingers were made before Forks!"
6. The Cemetery in Lima. A Monument erected to the Heroes of the Chilean War. Great Honor is paid to the Dead and Costly Memorial Monuments are found in all South American Cities.
7. Buried in a "Hole in the Wall!" Here lie Hundreds of Lima's Dead. The Doors of Many of the Tombs are carved, and decorated with Gold and Silver.
8. In the Mountains. From Lima to Cerro de Pasco.
9. At all Stations Natives have Flowers and Fruit for Sale at Prices considerably lower than in American Railroad Restaurants.
10. The Trains climb the Mountains in a Zigzag Line. The Engine is always reversed on a Turn Table but the Cars are never turned.
11. This River runs over the Bridge while the Train passes beneath the Bridge.
12. For More than a Thousand Years Indians have cultivated these Terraced Gardens whose Rock-built Edges keep the Soil from Washing down into the Valley.
13. Higher and Higher the Train climbs toward the Snow Clad Peaks which here rise to a Height of Four Miles

14. The Oroya Railroad of Central Peru is the Highest in the World - over 15,000 Feet above Sea Level.
15. The Tunnel is 15,000 Feet above the Sea. The Peaks in the Background rise almost 7,000 Feet above it. The Inexperienced Traveler suffers from Mountain Sickness, compared with which Sea Sickness is Nothing at All.
16. Cerro de Pasco, the Highest Mining Town in the World. Indians, Donkeys, and Llamas do most of the Work.
17. The Llama is Some Animal. It has a Head like a Camel, Legs like a Deer, Ears like a Skye Terrier, Wool like a Sheep, and Probably feels like a Goat.
18. In the Market Place. No Middlemen to boost the Price. The Only Thing High about the Living here is the Altitude.
19. The Copper Smelters.
20. Open Sewers in the Streets Have no Terror for the Andean Indians.
21. All Indian Men wear the "Poncho", a Coarse Native Blanket with a Hole through which they thrust their Heads - Overcoat, Umbrella, and Sunshade by Day and a Quilt at Night.
22. The Women wear a Round Hat, a Shawl, and a Half Dozen or more Skirts. The More Skirts the More Style!
